

This shoot is done entirely on your own, and is one of the requirements for your final portfolio.

The premise is to pick something near your home/work/school that you can shoot over time so as to capture the change from winter to summer, or first bud to bloom.

One challenge is to think creatively – what stands to photograph well and is likely to show well in a series of images over time? Think about how you'd frame three of these picture from beginning to end to show the time lapse.

If you did not start this before winter left us (hahahahaha, too funny for this year), then get into a yard/near a tree and capture the bud to bloom idea. Same deal – think about how you'd frame three of these picture from beginning to end to show the time lapse.
